In order to qualify and be eligible to be treated as a regulated investment company, a fund must, among other things, distribute substantially all of the fund's taxable income and gains annually. Based upon the currently available information, we believe the above distribution satisfies the required distribution amount. If upon further information the above distribution does not satisfy the required distribution amount, each fund may distribute an additional amount, which would increase the amounts set forth above.

Distributions are taxable for the year in which they are paid whether you take them as cash or reinvest them. The amount of distribution you receive is equal to the number of shares you hold on the record date multiplied by the per share distribution amount. Keep in mind that you should add reinvested income dividends and capital gains distributions (from both taxable and tax-free funds) to your original cost basis when it comes time to calculate gains or losses on shares sold. Distributions are taxable for the year in which they are paid. Distributions, such as those mentioned above, are included on IRS Tax Form 1099-DIV mailed to you each year by February.
